

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Washington: The district has seen far fewer tourists than in the pre-coronavirus era, WUSA-TV reports. According to data released by Destination D.C., before the pandemic, the city welcomed about 24.6 million visitors in 2019. Elliott L. Ferguson II, president and CEO of DDC, said he believes only about 11 million domestic visitors will travel to the city in 2020, about 53% fewer than the previous year.
