

Revived Medical Training Academy holds ribbon cutting

ARDIE ARVIDSON
Morning News
aarvidson@florencenews.com

FLORENCE, S.C. — A ribbon cutting was held for Revived Medical Training Academy on Wednesday to celebrated its membership into the Greater Florence Chamber of Commerce. Chamber ambassadors joined in the celebration of the opening of the academy and its membership into the chamber.

The academy is at 2724 W. Palmetto St., Suite 5, in Florence.

Owner Lavanda Martin said the academy provides CPR certification, continuing education for nurses, mentoring and tutoring for nursing students, and teacher certification. It also holds seminars and workshops. Revived Medical Training Academy is focused on “providing an enriched learning environment that offers an extensive amount of knowledge to begin your career as a medical professional,” according to its website.

“I want to help future nurses and others in the medical profession, and I want to be a resource for them,” Martin said.

Her professional slogan is “Speaking life one breath at a time.”

Martin works with an executive assistant, Milia Griffin, and a receptionist, Nell Smoot.

Martin has a background is in nursing. She worked her way up the ladder from nurse’s assistant to LPN to RN and finally an RN with a master’s degree in nursing education. She received her education at Florence-Darlington Technical College and Western Governor’s University in Utah.

Martin has been a nurse for years and is an instructor at Francis Marion University in nursing and works at McLeod.

Martin said she has the skill sets and a wide range of knowledge to help someone chart a path in the nursing field.

Martin said she joined the Greater Florence Chamber of Commerce because the chamber is so involved in the community.

“I love what they stand for,” Martin said.

She looks forward to participating in chamber functions and the community.

Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday by appointment only.

CONTRIBUTED

Revived Medical Training Academy held a ribbon cutting on Wednesday. Owner Lavanda Martin cut the ribbon. Chamber ambassadors joined in the celebration.